Hobbyists often face a cluttered to-do list: building a model railroad, restoring a vintage car, painting a gallery-ready canvas, and keeping up with community events. The risk is spreading yourself thin, diluting quality and burning out. The DPSCD Calendar tackles this by asking two questions for each item: Applying this filter immediately narrows focus. For instance, a model builder might discover that installing a single functional turntable brings the greatest realism, while repainting minor decals offers marginal visual improvement. The calendar operates in three tiers: Must-do, Nice-to-do, and Nice-to-Wait. Each entry receives a score based on its contribution to long-term goals such as a finished exhibit, a polished video, or a community showcase. Tasks scoring high in both value and feasibility move to the Must-do list and are scheduled for the next sprint. Consider a hobbyist preparing for a regional exhibition. The Must-do
